Test your BAR-B-iQ

More and more, Americans are becoming "fired-up" about backyard barbecues. There will be an estimated 860-million cookouts in 60-million households by the end of the year. Outdoor cooking is a great way for the entire family to get involved with mealtime. But a few simple, safety rules should be remembered. Before your next cookout, take this brief safety quiz prepared by the makers of the Weber covered kettle:

1. Anything that burns may be used as a substitute for charcoal starter.
   True False
2. The grill should be positioned away from high traffic areas and further isolated by placing a few lawn chairs around it when small children are present.
   True False
3. If the charcoal isn't burning quickly enough, add more starter to the coals.
   True False
4. Liquid starter should be removed from the cooking area and put in a safe place, out of reach to children and pets, immediately after use.
   True False
5. No special tools are needed for outdoor cookouts.
   True False

ANSWERS:

1. False. Highly volatile substances such as kerosene or gasoline should never be used.
2. True.
3. False. Never add more liquid starter after the charcoal is ignited or the result could be flash-back burns, where the flame travels along the stream of liquid to the can.
4. True.
5. False. Long handled barbecue tools keep arms and hands away from the cooking area in case of flare up. And insulated barbecue mitts are suggested in order to prevent burns from hot surfaces.
6. True.
7. False. Dousing the coals with water is necessary only with brazier units. With the Weber and other damper-controlled units, the fire is extinguished by simply closing all dampers.
8. True. Scattered records make difficult the compilation of statistics about farm accidents, injuries and deaths, Dr. G. H. Hetzel, Cooperative Extension farm safety specialist has said.

As Virginia's only "official" farm safety specialist, Hetzel maintains a statistics clearinghouse in his office. He conducts safety training sessions with interested groups. But there are difficultues in tracking down hard statistics. For example, the U. S. Occupational Health and Safety Administration (OSHA) keeps tabs on only 46,000 or so if the nearly quarter million Virginians who earn their living farming. Because OSHA guidelines apply only to workplaces with one or more fulltime, non-family workers, hundreds of small farms are automatically exemt from routine safety inspections.

With the July 31 end of Farm Safety Week, Hetzel will conclude Virginia's first farm safety survey. Since last July, about 1,500 farmers have responded quarterly to a survey Hetzel designed. The survey asks simply if any farm accidents have occured during the past three months. If the reply is 'yes', respondents are asked to detail circumstances. The survey is funded by the Virginia Agricultural Foundation, and staffed by volunteers from local Farm Bureaus. First c omprehensive statistics will be compiled sometime this fall.

"Farm Safety is essential, not only to the farmer, but for the consumer who benefits from the farmer's work. Farm Safety Week is just oine week of special emphasis; the importance of farm safety should be recognized the year round," Carbaugh stated.

Hints For Homeowners

Home Improvement, Safety And Economy

BE WISE...ECONOMIZE!

Saving money by doing-it-yourself is becoming increasingly popular.

If you're like most Americans, you are really beginning to "think economy." There's a new and increasing awareness among all that we won't be able to enjoy forever the fruits of the world's highest standard of living, unless we do.

Fortunately, economizing has become not only popular but a proud achievement. Husbands and wives are doing their own home repair and improvement work, cutting outside-help costs and practicing economy in the purchase of quality, lifetime tools with famous names like Crescent, Nicholson and Wiss. Homesewing is on the rise, too.

With gasoline both short and expensive, Americans are driving less by planning their car use—car pooling to school and work, making one "downtown" trip accomplish the results of two, using public transportation more. We've readjusted our home heating and cooling levels, insulated attics and are using home appliances sparingly, with forethought, to economize and conserve.

There is hope. Inflation and shortages can be controlled if we're wise and economize!

Young Austrian Enjoys Visit To Appomattox

Peter Hehle, age 14, of Austria is enjoying an extended vacation in the home of long time friends, Mr. and Mrs. L.H. House of Route 2, Appomattox.

Mr. House, a retired Lt. Col. was born in Alabama; his wife, (a war bride), was born and reared in Holland. They met and were married while he was in the service.

When House retired from the military life, he and his wife visited in Europe with members of her family. In the beautiful mountains of Austria they found and fell-in-love-with an old farmhouse. They bought it, restored it, and lived there for twelve years.

Living nearby to the House family was the Hehle family; Dr. Hehle was the village vet. Peter, who was just a little fellow and the youngest of four children when the House family moved in, was constantly going to visit the House home. Since the House couple had no children, they became more and more attached to the handsome little boy. The friendship grew and when the House couple left Austria to come to the United States in July of 1977, Peter missed them deeply. They missed their young friend equally as much.

On July 8th. Peter arrived in the United States to visit his friends; he'll remain with them until August 25th. He is really enjoying his visit and the trip is everything he hoped it would be despite a bit of trouble in the London Airport.

For one reason or another, Peter had an eight-hour wait in the London airport and not a single person there spoke a word of German. Peter speaks German and has learned only a very few English words (most of those since his visit here), so friendly conversation was not part of the picture during that long stop over.

Imagine, eight hours to kill waiting for the plane and not being able talk with anyone!

Peter loves it here in Virginia but misses the beautiful mountains of his native Austria.

When asked what impressed him most about the visit, he replied (through Mrs. House, of course), "I love the people; they are all so friendly!"

He added that he loved the Appomattox Historical Park and all there was to see there.

Though not too enthused about going to school (he's a middle school student), Peter admitted that math and gym were his favorite subjects.

Girls? Well, he wouldn't give me a direct answer, but the twinkle in his eye told me that he appreciates them... American and Austrian!

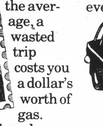
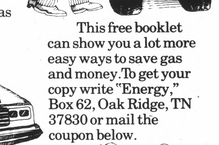
Call ahead to be sure you aren't wasting gas on an unnecessary trip. On the average, a wasted trip costs you a dollar's worth of gas.



Shop, bank and pay your bills by mail. A 15¢ stamp is a lot cheaper than a gallon of gas.

Ride a bike or take a hike. You'll feel more fit, and you'll have more money to spend when you get where you're going—since you didn't waste it on gasoline.

Ride to work with a friend or neighbor just one day a week and you can save at least $100 worth of gas every year.



Take public transportation as often as you can. You'll save gas and help reduce air pollution, too.
